Love is life’s greatest blessing. Love is a great thing to have, and all people should have it. There is nothing like love. Everyone should have love. If someone doesn’t have love, he will be sad. If people have love, they would be kissing or hugging.

Love is like a bird, flying gracefully above you. It is like a warm blanket, wrapping you as you get sleepy. Love is also like warm cinnamon buns fresh from the bakery that you are just hoping to eat soon. I think it shows the true meaning of what you really love deep down inside of you.

Love is like woods in the winter, trees swaying from side to side with snow sticking to the branches like sticky notes. Love is a dream to me because you can’t find it anywhere except in your heart.

If hugs were minutes,
I’d send you hours.
If kisses were water droplets,
I’d send you the ocean.
If you need a friend,
I’d send you me.

ASSIGNMENT: For Valentine’s Day: Write a story about friendship.

When I first came into kindergarten, I saw mainly faces of all different kinds looking at me (I was a visitor). There were many people I liked (including my teacher, Mrs. Luxenberg), but I immediately saw one person that I wanted to be best friends with!

The next day I decided I liked the school, so I became a student like everyone else. The girl I wanted to be best friends with was named.....can you guess? I’ll give you a hint. She has a big heart; a sense of humor; dark, long hair; and a warm, welcoming smile! I have many other good friends, but Uma has been a good listener, understanding and a wonderful best friend to me!

A good friend is a person who stands up for a pal. They hang out together, have lunch together, and above all, have fun together! You can have many good friends, or maybe just one. Good friends are friends who do what’s right for a buddy. Pals help pals with the elephant-sized problems and the peanut-size problems. Friends help friends. I love to hang out with my friends. At least three times a month I have a play date! If friends get into an argument, I am there to help. Friends share good times and bad times. Can friends stay in touch in many ways? Yes! They can do this by cell phones, texts, and/or play dates. They can also see each other in many places: school, after-school activities, or camp. Friends love friends.
